BRYAN, TEX., SEPTEMBER 12, 1910.

The Wills Point Chronicle crowds a volume of wisdom into this paragraph: "There is no end of fun in minding your own business, and it makes people like you better. It is better to have others stuck on you than to get stuck on yourself. Don't knock; don't get stubborn. Don't roast; just jolly. Everybody likes to be jolled. Be a good fellow—it's dead easy. Help yourself along; push your friend with you. No man ever helped himself by 'knocking' other people. You can't climb the ladder of fame by stepping on other people's corns; they are their corns, not yours, and they are tender. Help everybody; get hold with both hands when there is a chance to help your town. Bury your hatchet, drop your tomahawk, and hide your little hammer. Be a booster."

The Eagle carries to its readers every day interesting messages from many merchants, which contain information of much practical value. An advertisement is simply a business news item. The merchants of Bryan are our commercial reporters, and each is a specialist in his line, and their contributions are not surpassed in interest and importance by anything in our columns.

The Palestine Herald gives the commercial secretaries this good advice: "If the secretaries wish the co-operation of the country press it will please stay on the boosting job, and keep out of politics; lend their services to boosting and building Texas, and not to boosting and booming politicians, and in tearing down others."

There are young fellows in every town who can't make a living, but can make love beautifully. And there are silly girls who don't know any better than to think that is all that is necessary. This delusion makes business for the divorce mill.

"It was Mayor Gaynor who observed that nobody ever got a dividend out of a fuss," says the Fort Worth Star-Telegram. It is a cinch that no student of history can cite an instance of either party to a feud ever gaining anything by it.

"If a man's a natural born fool you can't do much with him," says Colonel Roosevelt. It is generally believed that nobody can do much with Colonel Roosevelt, yet nobody believes he is a fool.

If Brazos county farmers had begun years ago to cultivate the habit of raising corn and hogs, there would be more automobiles than crop mortgages in the county now.

Prohibition is bound to come, but it won't interfere with the alcohol massage. And the doctor who prescribes whiskey baths will be popular.

No organization except the political parties has any business meddling in politics and can not do so without impairing its usefulness.

The Eagle always said the legislature could not stay in session forever. It pays to be optimistic.

A political campaign is in most cases a steepchase for the pie counter.

IN THE CHURCHES.

CHRISTIAN.

There were the regular services yesterday with the usual attendance. The text of the morning sermon was from Hebrew x., 19-25. Three great exhortations were emphasized: First, to draw near to God in prayer and in life. There should be this approach that we may obtain mercy and grace and to fit us for service. The filings nearest the pole of the magnet have the greatest drawing power. Those out on the fringe have no power of attraction. Second, "Hold fast the confession of our hope that it waver not." It is not sufficient to draw near to God. We should remain near. "Give the more earnest heed to the things that were heard, lest happily we drift away from them." Third, "Let us consider one another to provoke with love and good works." We often consider one another from other viewpoints, from a money point of view, a social, business or educational, but here we are exhorted to consider one another for the purpose of provoking one another unto love and good works.

At night the text of the sermon was from John 1, 11-12: "He came unto his own and they that were his own received him not, but to as many as received him, to them gave he the right to become the children of God, even to those who believe on His name." When we consider the person set before us it is marvelous that anyone could reject Him. Yet when Jesus appeared to His own people as the Divine Son of God, as their Messiah, as a nation they rejected Him. But over against this darkness is the light. There were individuals that received Him even of His own people. After His ascension the thousands were soon multiplied, and today millions would die for Him. Following the declaration of some receiving Him is the marvelous statement that "To as many as received Him, gave He the right to become the children of God." There is no privilege above this, and all can enter into it by receiving Christ, by believing on His name, by obeying Him according to apostolic direction. The significance of this relationship is marvelous. We become the heirs of God. Our inheritance is "Incorruptible, undecaying and fading not away, reserved in heaven for us." We become an heir to "The kingdom prepared from the foundation of the earth," to the mansions in the Father's house, to eternal life, to be with Jesus and like Him. This is the best inheritance possible for any man. It is the riches that will never fail. Then who would not be a child of God on the simple conditions of the Gospel?

FIRST METHODIST.

There were 208 in the Sunday school yesterday morning. A teachers' meeting was held at 4:30 p. m. to arrange for this rapidly growing school.

At 11 o'clock the pastor preached to a fair congregation, his subject being "What Constitutes a First-Class Church Member." He said in substance: The vows of a member in all of the churches are substantially the same. There are three points covered, not so much negative as positive. The first point insisted on is a consistent life; the second, attending at least four services weekly, viz., Sunday school, morning and evening worship on the Sabbath and the midweek prayer service. Each was explained, showing its relative importance. The third point was, supporting the institutions of the church, explaining what these institutions are and pointing out the meagerness of our contributions compared with expenditures for needless personal pleasures.

The pastor announced the reception of four members by certificate.

At the evening hour another good congregation heard the pastor discuss the question, "Is Church Membership Essential to Salvation?" The debt that the world owes to the church was pointed out, and membership in some church in ordinary cases was declared to be essential for two reasons: First, uniting with a church was God's appointed way of confessing faith in the Savior; second, the church is the instrument for doing God's work in the world, which every saved man will want to help to do.

FIRST BAPTIST.

At the First Baptist church yesterday morning the sermon, preached by Rev. M. E. Weaver, was an explanation and discourse on "Association Missions." Dr. Weaver gave the description of the people and the territory of the association and made a splendid argument in behalf of the cause of association missions.

The sermon at the evening service was on "The Divinity of Christ," and was argued on four points: First, what His disciples and friends said of Him; second, what His enemies said of Him; third, what He said of Himself; fourth, what God said of Him. The arguments were clear, strong and to the point, and were of a convincing nature.

PRESBYTERIAN.

The attendance at the services of the Presbyterian church yesterday was above the average at each of the services, including the Sunday school.

In his morning sermon Rev. Caughley, the pastor, preached a most interesting sermon from these words as a text: "All of these things are against me." He based his remarks on three subdivisions: First, sometimes everything seems against us; second, this may not really be true; third, whether it be so or not, we may still triumph. The discourse was one of reason and eloquence, and was indeed true to the circumstances of everyday life.

At the night service the text was: "Thou hast kept the best wine until the last." In his remarks Rev. Caughley showed the rule of the world, how the best was first and the worst last, and then in contrast he showed how with Christ the worst was first and the best last, his final deduction being applied to the benefit of the Christian life.

KILLED BY HOGS.

Eight-Year-Old Boy Attacked by Vicious Animals Near Saratoga Saturday Afternoon.

Beaumont, Texas, Sept. 12.—J. M. Shaw, manager of the Rio Bravo Oil Company at Saratoga, Hardin county, is in the city and tells of the horrible fate of a young boy who was killed by hogs at Saratoga Saturday afternoon. The eight-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Ballinger was sent on an errand and, in company with a boy about ten years old, set out across a field. The boys were attacked by a number of vicious hogs. One of the most vicious of the boars bit the Ballinger boy on the leg and gored him fiercely in the thigh. The elder boy fought the hogs for a time and then ran for assistance, and when help arrived it was found that the Ballinger boy had suffered from the loss of blood to such an extent that he died shortly afterward.

$500,000 WORTH OF JEWELRY

Seized by New York Customs Officers in Past Few Months.

New York, Sept. 12.—That the vigilance of the customs agents at this port is profitable is shown by a report from Surveyor Henry, showing that over $500,000 worth of jewelry has been seized from alleged smugglers in the last few months. More than half of the gems were taken from women and about half is still in the hands of the authorities awaiting confiscation or adjudication.

The recent prosecutions, the surveyor says, have begun to have an effect on the passengers who formerly tried to smuggle, and the declarations are being made with greater care and accuracy than ever.
